Quick fact

"If trends persist, 75% of today's entering high school students will not complete the post-secondary education required to thrive in our globalized world. Whether or not students leave high school with a diploma and then follow through with plans for post-secondary education or training, often hinges on the attitudes they develop in the 8th and 9th grade about themselves, their futures, and their educations."

Dr. Rebecca Dedmond
The George Washington University's Freshman Transition Initiative

If you cannot contribute financially to a school's Career Choices program, consider volunteering your time as a guest speaker. Many of the discussion topics in Career Choices provide great opportunities for members of the business community to visit the classroom.
